國立彰化高中 114 學年度英文作文比賽高一組作文試卷與題目

題目：Many people use fake names on the internet. While this lets them talk freely, some people use this chance to say mean things or spread rumors because no one knows who they are. If you are posting something online, do you think using a real name is better than being anonymous (匿名)? Why or why not? Please share your ideas and provide examples to prove your points. (不用抄題，請寫 150 字左右)

I saw an article online talking about one's privacy in the Internet world, mentioning the hidden dangers you may not notice in our everyday use in there. While there's endless traps that might actually threaten our safety, there was one topic that caught my attention, which was "Should you use your real name when signing up an account or stay anonymous?"

When it comes to choosing an username when signing up on a website, I personally think it will be better to stay anonymous. While using my real name can probably prevent others taking my identity online, being anonymous can avoid troubles from strangers, and can also prevent the people you don't know in real life following you in your contacts or social media.

For instance, using your "nickname" that is known by the people you are close to in real life, can stay safe from strangers knowing your basic informations or simply knowing who you are. In this way, you're basically "hidden" from most of the strangers online, which is the first and the most important step when it comes to online privacy. Internet privacy should be our primary concern when stepping into a new website in the online world we living in right now. For safety, I will always be careful naming and choosing my username, and you should too!
