Living in the era where technology is blooming, we have more opportunities to connect with people. Methods such as social media, attending social events, and joining interest-based club are no longer rare, and people are allowed to say anything anytime. However, with the use of Internet, many people use fake names on the Internet, which lets them grab this chance to say rude words or spread rumors because they are being anonymous. In my perspective, using a real name online is better than using fake names.

First and foremost, no one has to be scolded or deteriorate by a stranger, whose user name is "user_name", "Pan123", etc. For those victims, they may feel depressed, sad or extreme furious after seeing these words, which leads to the lack of self-confidence or be moody. If they decide to start a fight with them, there is no better result but only left bad mood and being tired.

Secondly, people's reputation will be affected by rumors spread anonymously. For example, many junior and senior high school students have a anonymous board, which has student say some gossip and complain about somebody or something. Although there is no proof for these words, many students still choose to believe and spread it again. This leads to tragedies, some of the victims can't bare the pressure of rumors and bullying. They usually suicide in the end of the path.

Last but not least, some terrorist and anti-social personality people may use this chance to warn their attack. Nobody knows whether the message is real or it's just a joke. In order to avoid casualties and protect civilians, the government and police must take action to that. Whether the attack occurs, it causes the waste of public sources. Though there does have ways to find out who spread the message. It takes numerous time. Using real names online does help us avoid those problems, and people are able to live in a safe society.
